

The only program of fully interactive French education online

eLycée - online language education comes of age

San Rafael, November 1st, 2008 – eLycée, the only program of fully interactive French education online, launches a new program of online language courses for students aged 11 and up. Students sign in from anywhere to work with native French teachers, using shared applications and resources, in a unique 'virtual classroom' developed by eLycée.

Interactive online workspace

Superlative video conference technology enables students to see each other, talk to each other, and learn together in real time. Native French teachers – certified by the Ministère de l'éducation nationale française – bring French language and culture to life, encouraging participation and production in a total immersion environment. Students work in groups, in pairs or one-to-one with their teachers; everybody sits at the front of the class; everybody learns together; everybody is involved, all of the time.

Collaborative learning experience

Through eMédiathèque – eLycée's unique 'virtual classroom' – teachers and students have access to multimedia resources and real time collaborative tools like white boards, word processors, Internet browsers, and multimedia editors. Students make new friends and learn to appreciate the rich language and culture of France in a thoroughly modern environment.

Full program of courses

eLycée's compelling curricula were developed by teachers, scientists and artists. Courses are available for Adults, Primary, Middle School, High School and College students and adults, including AP® French Language & Literature courses accredited by the College Board.

Moving forward: education and Cognitive Science

Educational researchers in Lyon, Marseilles and Geneva work with eLycée's teachers – known as eProfs – to analyze the way students learn in this new virtual environment. This information is used to improve both the technology and eLycée's teaching methodology.

eLycée is supported by the Cultural Services of the French Embassy in the U.S.
